THE FACULTY AND OFFICERS

OF OUR SCHOOL,

WHO HAVE GUIDED US PATIENTLY AND WELL

ALONG UNTRIED PATHS,

AND HAVE GIVEN US THE PRICELESS

TREASURE OF WHOLESOME INFLUENCE,

WE, THE CLASS OF NINETEEN HUNDRED ELEVEN,

IN APPRECIATION OF THESE GOOD GIFTS,

GRATEFULLY DEDICATE THIS,

OUR ANNUAL,

Foreword

HE advent on the broader field of life of our Class of 1911 has been characterized by changes in the names of our Annual and of our school—both, we think, profiting happily thereby. If such wholesale change of names seems to call for some explanation, please remember, kind reader, that this is a girls' school.

To the class who christened our Annual "Chiaroscuro" we offer apologies. We have two reasons for altering it: first, because we could not say "Chiaroscuro;" second, we wanted a name that would smack of our school and state—hence "TECHNALA."

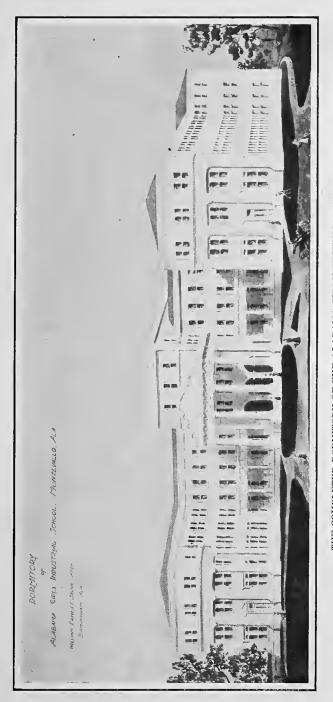

We hope that "old girls" who have lived amid the scenes herein pictured, and all friends whose good wishes we possess, will find pleasure in the pages of TECHNALA, and in the thoughts it will awaken of the Alabama Girls' Technical Institute.

THOMAS WAVERLY PALMER, A.M., LL.D.

Thomas Waverly Palmer, A.M., LL.D., was prepared for college in the rural schools of his native village, Furman, Ala.; student, Howard College, 1877-78; University of Alabama, 1878-82; received the degree of Master of Arts, 1881; Bachelor of Engineering, 1882; Doctor of Laws, 1906; Instructor of Mathematics, 1881-82; Associate Professor of Mathematics, 1882-83; Professor of Mathematics, 1883-1907; Dean of the Academic Faculty, University of Alabama, 1905-1907; President, Alabama Girls' Technical Institute, 1907; graduate student, University of Chicago, summer quarters, 1897, 1898, 1899; active member, American Mathematical Society, American Association for the Advancement of Science, National Education Association, National Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education.

Senior Class Poem

Ś

The Class of Eleven now hold out their hands To bid Montevallo good-by, With a lump in the throat, maybe, sobs in the voice, And perhaps a tear in the eye; For jolly good comrades, and closest of friends, And hosts of good times—we give up. Half afraid are we even to start on our way, For bitter, they say, is Life's cup. But if, Alma Mater, the trials we meet Seem heavy and hard to bear; If friends that we meet with are not friends at all, And sometimes we're weary of care, Then let us come back to thy walls for a day, Grow young with the mem'ries of youth, Forgetting the pain and the falseness of life, Rememb'ring the joy and the truth. Twill sweeten our lives for many a day, And scatter the clouds from the sky; And we shall go on, with hearts fresh and strong, "As e'er in our Taskmaster's eye."

- "What is Ila Allen's future?" asked some one.
- "Teaching History at A. G. T. I."
- "Hope I won't be the only one. Shall I?" asked Ila.
- "Miss Kelly will assist."
- "What will Irma Dale be?"
- "Gentle housewife."
- "How about roommates Haymans and Haas?"
- "They will coach those deficient in Chemistry."

Miss Haas was heard to groan.

- "What will Nora Greene be?"
- "Assistant dentist in Montevallo."

A smile passed around the circle.

- "O, we mustn't forget the town girls! What is to become of Mamie and Ella?"
 - "Both will soon marry."
- "What are we going to be? We just now heard what was going on," said Alma and Minnie Lee, coming in quite breathless.
 - "Both will teach Domestic Science."
 - "O!" said Alma; but at that instant the lights "winked."
- "My! I'd no idea it was so late!" exclaimed Lessie. "And I have not written up my Sunday-school notebook, either."

The last words heard of the meeting, Kate was calling over the banisters down to second floor: "You'd better be hurrying, Phœbe! Miss Stallworth will surely get you when you get to her hall, and you know the rest."

ELIZABETH HODGES ('11).

Acrostic

All the little girlies who have ever striven here Loved thee, as we love thee, O Alma Mater, dear!

And now, maidenlike, you have gone and changed your name,
But not your great glory, nor yet your resplendent fame.

All adown the long ages may thy praises roll;

May thy story to new generations be told,
And countless loves thy memory enfold.

To them that would harm thee we will each be a foe; Every one of thy beauties and virtues we know. Can we think of thee ever, unless the tears start? Hard, 'tis so hard, that from thee must we part!

GRACE GAST ('12).

The History of History

WO days each week the poor, miserable, weary, overburdened Seniors assemble for forty-five minutes of "intellectual" discussions of Civil Government, United States and Alabama Histories, accompanying a few lecture courses along lines of moral and social training. Some few girls, reaching the room early, endeavor to get points they did not have time to look up the preceding night. The 7:55 gong sounds, and every one becomes silent. A gentle step is heard approaching the class room, where sits every Senior trying to get a peep at every word in the first paragraph.

Miss Instructor enters, places all her "scratch" notebooks and texts in their particular places, and says: "This seems like Senior girls. I wonder if all of you have been this quiet ever since you came in."

(Elizabeth's hand goes up.)

Miss I.: "Miss Elizabeth has something to say, I believe."

Elizabeth: "Miss I., I must confess that I have not, but I feel justified in saying all that I have."

Miss I.: "Well, Little Girls, I must ask you what you were talking about before I came in. How many were talking? Well, I believe Miss Mattie's hand went up first."

Mattie C.: "I asked Irene what basket-ball team was going to play us this afternoon."

Miss I.: "You Senior girls know that you should not be discussing athletics in the History Room. This is a place for more serious subjects. I believe there was a hand up over yonder—Miss Phœbe Cary. Miss Cary, pardon me for not seeing your hand sooner, but the little girl in front of you has such an immense bow of ribbon on her hair that I failed to see it. Will that little girl please change her position? You would be better off if you would take more time for putting something in your heads instead of so much on them. Now, Miss Cary."

Phœbe: "I just asked Lily what it was Miss Stream sat upon her for last night—was it for wearing low neck and short sleeves."

Miss I.: "The idea of a Senior using such unbecoming language and looking after the matters of the Discipline Committee! But we must hasten with the lesson; we have taken too much time already. [Ser tches her head and gives her watch charm its daily slide.] I wish to ask the class how far they have studied; but will Miss Daisy close the blinds, it us first? [Every girl looks toward the window.] Little Girls, Miss Daisy alone can attend to that; you show your thoughtlessness so clearly. I believe Miss Glennie had her hand up to tell us how far she had studied."

Glennie: "Miss I., I studied the first four chapters and read the others over; but I did not have much time for learning the last ones, since I have four tests to-day, and the lecture last night took up so much time that I did not have opportunity for either the library work or study of the text. I looked up the bills of the Legislature in all the back papers; read Governor Comer's speech to the Legislature, which I outlined for my permanent notebook; looked up the national officers; read that article on moral training, taking notes on it; looked up Charlemagne's life, and found his other name, 'Charles the Great,' and why he was so called, also the life of Egbert; but I did not find any connection between his work and that of the Crusades."

Miss I.: "I hate to interrupt, but I wish to tell the class that I shall give them another day on that last point before we take it up in class; but they must have a paper on Egbert before the work of this department is complete. Continue, please."

Glennie: "I looked up those modern ideas on the gods in all the magazines you told us—"

Miss I.: "I dislike so much to break into your answer, but I feel that I must take the time to ask if you did not look up what was said concerning the female goddesses, too."

Glennie: "Yes'm, but I forgot to say so. I believe they are all the references I had time to read. O, yes! I copied sixty-six pages on my permanent notebook, and found out all I could about the beginning of the State of Alabama."

Miss I.: "Pshaw, pshaw! You did not even look up about the sons of Noah."

Glennie: "Miss I., I just did not have time."

Miss I.: "I know you Little Girls have a great deal of work, but you should not try to carry so much that you cannot do justice to all of it. You are not Seniors if you cannot do the work assigned you. That is what I say about the girls in this school, especially in History, which is, without doubt, the weakest department in the school. You don't know how to study and use your time. I am afraid that I cannot recommend all of you for graduation. The Freshmen may be excused for not knowing all these things, so the other classes. Really, the best way I know to characterize the four classes is: The Freshmen don't know it, and think they do know it; the Sophomores don't know it, and know they do not; the Juniors know it, and don't know they know it; and the Seniors know it, and know they know it. How many of you got as far as Miss Haymans?"

(All hands go up but three.)

Miss I.: "So much for that. I'll ask those three girls to stop and see me after class, since we have no time to discuss weak girls here. How many looked up those national officers?"

(Several hands go up.)

Miss I.: "Who is President?"

All Together: "Dr. Palmer."

Miss I.: "Little Girls, Little Girls! I am surprised! We are talking about national officers. You have all been asleep. Before I go further, though, I would like to say to Miss Pansy, before I forget, that she must not get loose in her work just because she has had measles. I believe Miss Nora's hand went up."

Nora G.: "Well—er—Miss I—"

Miss I.: "We have no time for Miss Nora's 'wells;' so if you can't go, sit down and let me pass you."

Nora G.: "Miss I., I thought you were talking about the school, for I know the President of the United States."

Miss I.: "Well, Little Girls, I guess I didn't make myself clear. Let me put my question to you again, and make myself more distinct. Who is President of the United States—not the state itself, but our own nation, country? Of course not the school! Let Miss Greene answer."

Nora: "Roosevelt."

Miss I.: "Miss Greene you are a little excited, and have your facts mixed. However, your work is usually very good, except your handwriting. I'm afraid that will make your life a failure. I believe I will state my question again, since so many of you seem to think I did not make myself clear. First, I'll ask Miss Winnie Davis Neely how she understood the question."

Winnie O.: "I understood you to ask who the present President of the United States is."

(All hands go up a little uncertain.)

Miss I.: "I'll ask Miss Winnie Davis to venture the answer."

Winnie D.: "I think Taft is."

Miss I.: "Very good, indeed. I am very proud of you, for you are the first to give any definite answer."

(8:45 bell rings.)

Miss I.: "Well, I guess that is our bell; but the period has been so short.
O, I'm very sorry we didn't cover the ground! I don't know what I am to do with this class."

[Exit girls.]

Dormitory Regulations

- 1. Quiet need not be maintained during study hours, and girls may have frequent feasts after the lights are out at night.
 - 2. Running on the halls is to be indulged in at all times, freely and noisily.
- 3. Tacks, pins, screws, or nails may be driven into the walls continually, and pictures be fastened to walls by mucilage. Every girl is urged to write on woodwork and walls.
- 4. All trash must be thrown from the window; trash baskets are too expensive.
- 5. On leaving the rooms, turn on steam and leave all windows wide open, so that "all of Shelby County may be kept warm."
 - 6. Talking from windows is encouraged.
- 7. Lights must be kept on when occupants are not in the rooms, to keep "ghosts from circulating."
 - 8. Every girl is encouraged never to sleep in her own room at night.
- 9. Any pupil who changes her room is paid the fee of fifty cents. This privilege is readily granted.
- 10. Any glass broken by occupants of rooms must not be reported to the office, for all damages of this kind are paid out of the lecture fund.
 - 11. Girls may come to meals occasionally if they so desire.
 - 12. Friends and relatives are urged to spend the night in the Dormitory.
 - 13. Study hours may be used as a period of "permiscuous" visiting.
- 14. When lights "wink," all conceivable noises must be made, and students must congregate on halls, always running on cross halls.
- 15. Every girl must have a chafing dish to prevent eating at regular meals.

Our Lone Professor

A man he was to all the Seniors dear, For him we never entertained a fear! Though late to class, he never did complain, And from harsh words he ever did refrain. Unpracticed he to keep in after school, A thing the other teachers made a rule. If some point in the text we did not get, "The text's to blame," he said, and did not fret. And if perchance he absent was from class, "Your notebooks, girls, will help the time to pass." The trait of his that always pleased us best Was that he strongly disapproved of tests. If feeling blue when we came into the room, With jokes and smiles he soon dispelled the gloom. And every member of the Science Class Was sorry when the hour ten-thirty had passed. Full many a lesson rare and rich he taught; A wealth of knowledge to our minds he brought. Now, in conclusion, I've a word to say To those dear friends who here expect to stay: If Chemistry's the thing you have in view, Our "lone professor" is the man for you.

Problems for the Faculty to Solve

- I. Divide two hours and a half into seven parts of one hour and a half each, said hour and a half necessary to prepare each lesson assigned.
- II. What is the discriminated wholeness in our immediate perception if the deductive reasonings, emotional impressiveness, and elemental tranquallizing experiences of unsympathetic emotions are psychologically deducted by careful introspection? To be worked out by analytic-synthetic reasonings, with conventional language.
- III. Write a theme on "The Imagination of a Flea Sitting upon the Top of the Capitol at Washington."
- IV. How long does it take a Senior to review eight hundred and four lines of Latin for a test, if she has to bring up forty new lines written and read forty by sight? How long would it take to find out said Latin lesson requires over forty-five minutes?
- V. Name all the national officers, from the date of George Washington's inauguration to the present time, of the United States, England, France, Germany, Russia, Italy, Portugal, and all other countries, with dates and grandfathers of each.
- VI. Sketch from nature the entire globe as seen from the studio window, with a mule in the foreground.
- VII. Place the heels together, arms sideways, shoulder high, and, without moving the hands, raise the hair twenty times while ten is being counted.
 - VIII. Why do the gongs keep such correct time?
- IX. How can a girl make her payment when she has only ten cents and a one-cent stamp, and can't hear from home?
- X. Discuss the following as a definition of the library: A place in which books are out.
- XI. If two lines are going up and one line is coming down a stairway four feet wide, would it be more culpable for a fourth line waiting at the top to slide down the railing or to be ten minutes late for class?

To Miss Poynor, wonderful to relate, we bequeath our forgiveness for having thus far continually annoyed us with Latin verbs. It is our wish that she may forget, as we have already done, not only the annoyance she has caused us, but also every rule in the Latin grammar, and every verb, except "amo."

To Miss Moore we give our voices to have and to hold if she can hold them.

To Mrs. Howie we give our stock of jokes to use instead of the one about Adam, Eve, and the toad.

To Miss Leake we leave our collection of rag, coon songs, vaudeville snatches and variations. We would give her something more, but this is all we have that would interest her.

To Miss Grote we leave our knowledge of electricity, provided that she will use the same in a successful repairing of the gongs.

To Miss Bolton, our handbags.

To Miss Stephens, our gray uniforms, dyed pink.

To Miss Franklin, that better word for which she is continually searching, also Gene Powell's treatise on "The Proper Way of Drinking Water, Milk, or Coffee from a Large Soup Bowl."

3. Having expressed our love for the Faculty, and desiring to do the most good with our property, we will the following-named articles to our friends among the undergraduates:

To the Juniors, our Psychologies and sympathies.

To the Sophomores, our prettiest dresses; our highest-heeled slippers; our paint, powder, and puffs; our hair ribbons; our frat. pins; our U. of A. and Auburn College hats; and our love.

To the Freshmen we give our measles, failures, defeats, losses, crosses, and worries, in order that they may know how sublime a thing it is to suffer. Furthermore, we bequeath to the aforesaid Freshmen all our mental capacity, to be placed at interest until 1913-14. We do hereby appoint Miss Henry as their guardian. [Seal] CLASS OF 1910.

· THE JUNIORS' PROLOGUE

Whan that school life with its nightes soote The Blisse of Ignorance hath perced to the roote, And hath brought every maide to Junior pow'r, Than feel we Time hath strucke the houre, Than smale girles maken melodye And slepen after ten with open eye; So priketh hem Nature in hir corages All longen to goon Turkey Pilgrimages, And form Litel Girlies into jollie bandes That loven to follow their own commandes. Specially thir energies not to bend From Science and Math, thir secretes to rende, Bifel that in that sesonn on that daye Came '12 to A. G. T. I. in great arraye, Ready to wenden on our pilgrimage To Juniordom, with ful devout corage. In Septembre was come into that Dormitorye Ful nigh eighty in that companye Of sondry girles, by aventure i- falle In feliow-and-scholarship weren they alle, That toward Seniordom woulde striven With mindes alle alerte and aliven. Evene as Freshmen weren atte beste When Aline Robertson led alle reste; And schortly came we to Sophomoricdom Whan we weren ledde by Marve Anderson; Than Lettye Daffyne came upon the ryse To Juniordom, as I now yow devise. But natheless, I have not time or space Any further in this tale to pace: Methought it accordant to resoun To sprinkle in this Historye, as seasoun, Such factes as it doth seme to me Will help telle you what is our degre, And eek what state Juniores are inne: And now this tale I here ende.

THE JUNIOR'S LAMENT

The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the years, Of wailing sounds, and sad laments, and lessons that stir tears. Buried 'neath a load of care, our earlier hopes lie dead: A mournful strain they echo to Memory's silent tread. Those childish hopes and dreams are flown, and now we have to say Physics, Ethics, and Theorems throughout the livelong day.

Where are the dreams, the fresh young dreams, that lately sprang and stood. In brighter light and softer airs—our Freshman sisterhood? Alas! they all are in their graves; the tender, soft, young dreams Are lying in their lowly beds, and dark the future seems. Those were happy, care-free days back in the Freshman Class; But now it's toil and troubles sad to win a decent pass.

The Sophomores' love of finery—it perished long ago;
The crown of puffs, the dear soft curls, and painted cheeks aglow;
Aspiration to social claims was mania with us there.
For we were gay and giddy, and had not a single care,
Till time rolled on, and poor, harassed Juniors we became,
And the brightness of our smiles was gone, as were our hopes to fame.

When, after weary toiling, we Juniors were at last, Then there was no more turning, for our bitter fate was cast; For our troubles were only beginning, we learned with utter grief; And we wept that time so gay and glad could have a life so brief; Yet 'twas not unmeet, we knew, that joyous time should perish, For lessons learned through labor we shall forever cherish.

Then welcome that day, long wished, that brings us to Seniority, When every one shall recognize our great superiority. Our highest hopes will be realized, though we seek for knowledge still, And we'll always keep our faces bright, come whatsoever will.

"No victory without labor," our motto none can surpass, Is dear to us as the Black and Gold, the banner of our class.

Freshman Class History

NE afternoon in the month of September, 1910, we, one hundred and seventy-three classmates, met for the purpose of organizing our class. Not having yet been "through the mill," the accomplishments of the girls were not generally known, so the qualifications which won offices were ready wit and extreme good looks. It is said that our President won her office by a superior amount of back hair. We chose for our class colors green and white. We thought these colors very appropriate. Green was chosen as a sign of freshness, of capacity for growth; white, as an emblem of the purity of our minds.

Alleen McKenzie was elected President; Laura Mae Baxter, Vice President; Marie Steele, Secretary; Alleyne Wallace, Treasurer; Erin Walker, Musician; Sadie Murphy, Poet; and Mabel Dowling, Historian.

We were happy when our existence was first recognized on December 14, 1910, when we celebrated Alabama Day.

The Freshman Class is noted for its ambitious members. We long for the time when we can throw off that apologetic air that belongs to those of our years and experience. One of our great ambitions is to be treated as though we are not infants. That important, self-satisfied Senior look, which we so often see, is one of our longings. Some of our number have already achieved to some extent this much-to-be-admired air. Still another burning desire of our hearts is to grow accustomed to eating syrup with a spoon and looking natural meanwhile. Many other things for which we yearn are too sacred for expression.

Our class has been saddened by the loss of two of its members, Georgia Lowe Callaway and Haseltine Nabors, who have been called to that land where problems are no more. We miss them.

But we shall not always be Freshmen. In three more years we should enter the world equipped with all modern improvements. Meanwhile we trust that the outside world is awaiting us with proper anxiety. If the reader desires to keep informed of the doings of this class in years to come, he will do well to read diligently the writings of the future great minds, where doubtless our further acts will be honored.

MABEL DOWLING ('14).

Freshman Class Poem

THE FATE OF THE FRESHIES

We Freshmen have an awful time
In being hourly Sat Upon!
'Tis common in our schoolgirl clime
When we try to have some fun.
We go to Math. a second late,
We get Sat Upon right hard.
O, ours is the saddest fate!
(Words fail this limping bard.)

In Science, and in every class,
Our fate's always the same;
So rapidly the questions pass,
One hardly knows her name;
And, missing, she is Sat Upon,
Then Sat Upon some more,
From peep of day till set of sun,
Till it gets an awful bore!

We try to snatch an extra nap.

And find shut the dining-room door.
In Study Hall an extra rap
Will call forth teachers galore.
Short sleeves in winter, or low necks,
Call forth the same old thing,
Until our nerves make of us wrecks,
And "14's hard luck," we sing!

A Sonnet

My face is laid against the windowpane;
Without I see the tender grass, whose tips
Just peep above the sod; and now there drips
From eaves and tiny leaves a gentle rain;
Tis silvering each budding thing. I'd lain
All night to dream wide-eyed of one whose lips
No more might call my name. How grief now grips
The soul! How much in worth things lost do gain!

But stay; no more shall I to bitter tears
Give o'er. As after showers so the day
But brighter grows, who knows but that my years
Of life shall purer be because some gray
And lonely days are known? And now my fears
Relieved, I henceforth welcome clouds, alway.

of Tobacco." The Indians thought that this star watched over their tobacco patches.

A strange thing noticeable about Francesyancey, one of the clearest stars in the entire group, is that near the Mardi Gras season it is observed to depart from its path and go toward Mobile.

A legend quite as pathetic as that of Kendymian is told of Overtona, a star of surpassing loveliness. She was, ages ago, a girl, and had a pet goose which she greatly loved. One day, as she was playing with her pet, it began to soar heavenward. As the astonished girl gazed, the goose gradually changed its form from a goose to an old man riding a hay fork, just as witches ride broomsticks. Greatly amazed, she could but look, anxiously and sorrowfully. Finally she could no longer see anything in the blue sky. Still she gazed, sad-eyed. Thus she sat for days, paying heed to no one. At last she felt herself lifted up, up, up, until she found herself a star among many others of a like kind. She had reached the Faculty zenith.

"Thou art a lovely mystery, Flaming Star!
Throughout the diamond-pointed, glittering sky,
In beds of deepest, purest sapphire, lie
Thy rolling orbs, which we see from afar."

Another luminous star is Wills. This name ever brings to our mind the familiar verses:

- "Twinkle, twinkle, little Wills! How their heart with pleasure fills When the stars up in the sky See you drawing ever nigh!
- "But this wonder fills my heart:
 'Which star do you like the best?'
 For your vague, uncertain 'spark'
 Keeps us strangely in the dark.
- "I fear I'll ne'er find out which one, For the bright and glorious sun Of this term is almost set, And I see no diamond yet.
- "So I ponder this all night:
 'When you show your little light,
 Which heart most with pleasure fills?'
 Twinkle, twinkle, little Wills!"

I Remember, I Remember

(A.D. 1921.)

I remember, I remember
The school where I was taught;
Where I, with hard, unceasing toil,
My stock of wisdom bought.
And several things about that place
I never shall forget;
Although my mem'ry's dimmed and blurred,
They stand out clearly yet.

I remember, I remember
The 'bus that took me there—
That rackle-shackle-shambly 'bus,
The Kroell-Mulkey "coach and pair."
But—O!—the joy in our young hearts
At Christmas time and May,
When those same old 'buses came to bear
Us on our homeward way!

I remember, I remember
The soup—I guess I oughter;
We had it every day for lunch;
'Twas plentiful as water.
If I had all the soup we drank,
I'd make a swimming pool
So cold and dark and deep and dank,
And will it to the school.

I remember, I remember,
From nine o'clock till noon
On Sundays, sermons—none too short—
And "amens"—none too soon.
But lengthy sermons trained us for
The lectures. O, my soul!
We endured them both, thanks be to Sleep,
"Beloved from pole to pole."

I remember, I remember
The gongs that ne'er worked right;
They silent were, sometimes, all day,
Then started up at night.
When they began, we never knew
When they would stop again.
O, signals, shall I call you gongs?
Or but a fitful din?

I remember, I remember
The Infirmary, 'cross the way,
Where murky doses, capsules thick,
Were handed out all day.
If we had taken half that stuff,
None were left the tale to tell.
As 'twas, we threw it in the fire,
And got entirely well.

I remember, I remember,
Besides these, more details;
But, notwithstanding all of this,
A strange fact yet prevails:
Although I studied long and hard
To improve my mind so shallow,
I've forgotten everything I learned
In school at Montevallo!

WINNIE D. NEELY ('11).

Consignments for Hallowe'en Caldron

ISS KENNEDY'S watch slide; Mr. Wills' nose glasses; Miss Higgins' 4-o'clock matinées, also her "background;" Long's Literature, accompanied by Woolley; Miss Grote's Physics notebooks; the Discipline Committee, and all rules thereof; all Laboratory apparatus; Lectures, every one of them; Recreation Period; our lovely uniforms; 6-o'clock Whistle; the Gongs, always wrong; all rats and puffs; Mary Mc-Millan's little gray sweater; Miss Poynor's 4-o'clock engagements; sitting in chapel; uniform inspection; Soup; all Dormitory Regulations; all Latin verbs; Miss Franklin's lavenders; high shoes and long sleeves; Miss Mellown's capsules; and all other things not herein specified that make our days hideous.

Recipe for Soup

(Excuse the meter.)

To make this soup I'd like for you to know The few things put in it to make it so: A bushel of potatoes, and left-over hash; Some outside bread crusts, and such like trash; Let onion atoms lurk within the pot, And then red pepper to make it hot; Leave out the salt (it costs too much a sack). And put in some flour so it won't look slack, Or else a little meal, just for a change; After that, you may just set it on the range; Pour in water, barrels at a time; Put in canned tomatoes, just worth a dime; Let it boil and boil until it is nice; Then take it up and set it on ice; Then when it cools as long as it is able, Take it in and put it on the table. O, great, glorious, heavenly treat! 'Twould tempt an ancient hero to eat. Back to the world he'd turn his fleeting soul, And plunge his lips into our soup bowl. Serenely full, the epicure would say: "Fate cannot harm me; I have dined to-day."

How it Happened

The A. G. T. I. girls to meals are never, never late; The cause of this strange circumstance to one and all I'll state. It happened just like this, at a time when all was gay, And the heart of each girl was light as a bird's in May: For days we had been late to breakfast, lunch, and dinner; So something must be quickly done, and woe to every sinner! 'Twas then-alas!-we heard the words which forever sealed our fate: "Hereafter in this dining room no meals to students late!" Now this is just the reason we all now so promptly flock To the dining room at mealtime, at the sounding of the clock.

IRENE SAVAGE ('12).

Laws of the Maids and Persecutors

- 1. Take a cold or cough, for short sleeves and low shoes are not for thee.
- 2. Wear heels on thy shoes, or bows on thy hair.
- 3. Run down the halls, or cross thy feet in class.
- 4. Be late to meals, or steal sugar from the dining room.
- 5. "Monkey," "flirt," or "show thy affections in public."
- 6. Cram for exams.
- 7. Be afflicted with "Sunday sickness."
- 8. Spy upon the teachers when they talk in chapel.
- 9. Visit "promiscuously" after 9:30.
- 10. Sleep during lectures.
- 11. Run the elevator, for thou mightest hurt thyself.
- 12. Use the telephone, especially when teachers are around.
- 13. Sit on the stone steps or "hot boxes."
- 14. Be extravagant with thy "pin money."
- 15. Grumble over going to lectures; they are more important far than thy lessons.
 - 1. Remember the monument to thy dear teacher who wastes her life "pouring water through a sieve."
 - 2. Be sat upon sixty seconds in every minute, and bear it cheerfully.
 - 3. Eat soup, for it is very fattening.
 - 4. Carry thy message to Garcia.
 - 5. Love thy teachers and let it be known.
 - 6. Learn the "A B C's of construction."
 - 7. Attend all dry lectures, and profit thereby.
 - 8. Learn that the "longer thou leanest, the leaner thou gettest."
 - 9. Report all thy wrongdoings to the Discipline Committee.
- 10. "Unlock."
- 11. "Recreate," rain or shine.
- 12. "By all manner of means," "be accurate."
- 13. Do two hours of "reference" work, practice, and learn all thy many lessons in two and one-half hours.
- 14. Hold thy peace in chapel.
- 15. Always "keep in class."

Miss Smith's "Mustard" Plaster

There was a girl who had a pain That hurt her awful bad; She feared it would attack her brain, And that would be too sad.

Then dear Miss Smith, so good and kind, Rushed in her pain to ease. "O, Miss Mellown, what must I do? O, tell me quick; do, please!"

"Go get the mustard on the shelf, And make a plaster thick." She hurried out and got the jar, And made the plaster quick.

How Miss Smith in triumph stood! And how her heart did flutter! Alas! the plaster did no good; 'Twas made of peanut butter.

M. M. AND C. N.

Hear the wild, chaotic gongs-Brazen gongs! What a mad confusion reigns because they will go wrong! How they jangle, jangle, jangle, In the awful dead of night, Or at break of early morning Ring out their unearthly warning, With a fiendish, mad delight! Out of time, time, time, Without reason, without rhyme, Causing wrath and consternation, causing maledictions strong

On the gongs, gongs, gongs, gongs, gongs, gongs, On the clanging and the banging of that Gong!

Always wrong!!

Genuine Bits from a Genuine A. G. T. I. Diary

A. G. T. I., FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1910.—"There would be no sunshine if there was no darkness." Perhaps that's why this past week has been so lonesome. Came to this place last Tuesday a week ago—September 13, 1910. It seems as if I have been here over a year. My, but I'm homesick! Will I ever forget the night I came? When I was shown to my room, there were about fifteen girls there to see my roommate. I shall always remember the sensation I had on entering the room. Ginger Clang, my roommate, came forward and introduced Sis and me to the girls. They were all so sweet and jolly I soon felt like one of them. Thought I was going to be delighted with this place, but I'm not. My roommate is just darling. She is the cutest thing ever. I haven't done much of anything but cry. I cry every night at about twelve o'clock. Last Tuesday mamma called me up, and I had hysterics. Every one in the school heard me and thought some one was dead. Hadn't cried since three to-day. Got a letter from sister, and she said Sarah couldn't come down Saturday. I was so disappointed I just had to shed a few tears. Mamma wrote me that Jimmie Doodle came by home and didn't even ask about me. Don't I feel little?!!?! .

Ginger and I have a time getting down to breakfast in time. It seems impossible to complete our toilet. Ginger never gets time to put on her hair, and my face is never clean.

Our Dormitory is just great, and the campus is so nice with swings and benches under all the trees. The Infirmary is a dear, picturesque old place; such a grand house to be sick in. We have a crackerjack tennis court and a fine basket-ball diamond out back of the Dormitory. I like all my teachers fine, and I know I shall be more content after I get over my homesick spell. Well, good-by for this time.

SEPTEMBER 26.—I have just emerged from the bath room. What a bath I did have! It was great. Have had the best time since last Friday. My! Saturday night Mary and I put on our gym. suits. We slid down the fire escape after 8:30 and went all over the campus. We also danced, danced, danced that night. I was certainly ready for the bed at 10.

Sunday morning went to church. Came back, and we took some kodak pictures in our uniforms. Finish this to-morrow; Ginger has something to eat.

SEPTEMBER 27.—My, it was good! Well, Sunday afternoon Mary Gay went home. How I wanted to go with her! Sunday night I went to see Eliza Herman, and met Mera Holder. Like her fine.

Monday morning we put on our gym. suits and went kodaking. Had a dandy time. Mrs. H. and I went to town to-day. We had such a great time. About sixty girls went, and we were all in the drugstore at once. Came back in time for supper; studied, and then started this; but Ginger gave me something to eat, so that ended everything. Nothing doing so far to-day, Tuesday. So by-by.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 25.—O, my! I haven't written my diary in such an age. I just can't find time. I went home and stayed sixteen days, and had the best of time. How many things have happened! Have been back to school about four weeks, and have been having some jolly times, but won't stop to enumerate them. Yesterday was Thanksgiving. I just hate to write this, but will spare a little of my time, anyway. Well, here goes:

A few Sundays ago I started to church, and decided not to go; so when I got to the corner in town, I took a rock and knocked the heel off my shoe. Of course I came back. The teachers didn't suspect me in the least.

But I was certainly "stung" last week. Didn't know my lessons, so reported to Infirmary to stay all day; but, instead, Miss M. gave me the most horrid dose of salts and made me report to classes. Horrid!!!

Sunday before last Ginger and I prepared some Xmas stockings and hung them on Kiti's and Mag's door during meditation. Miss O. heard us, and said that whoever did that certainly would catch it. We denied having done it, so nothing happened.

NOVEMBER 29.—Nothing doing Monday, 'cept I was homesick. To-day I confessed going to Crape's during meditation Sunday. Am in chapel now, and have finished all my lessons and this, so will stop and dream of Lops. Wonder what he'll be doing twenty years from now, and where I'll be? Good night.

Hall Echoes

- "Has the bell rang?"
- "Lend me your hair to-day."
- "Why does Bessie Mc. always wear her green coat to breakfast?"
- "Do we have to wear our uniforms to the lecture?"
- "Do we have to recreate this afternoon?"
- "Child, I flunked flat in History."
- "Were you in the Turkey Trot last year?"
- "Please give me your picture."
- "Are you going to the matinée at four o'clock? Miss Higgins said for all Freshmen to be there!"
- "Do you know any one who has any crackers?"
- "Hand me some candy!"
- "Button my dress quick! The whistle has blown!"
- "Lend me something to wear!"
- "Throw a shoe at those rats!"
- "How do you like that new girl?"
- "Don't laugh so loud; Miss Blank will catch you!"
- "Has the mail come? Did I get anything?"
- " Have you had the measles?"
 - (Third Floor, West Wing, 5:30 A.M.)—"Selections from Bach!"
- "I smell sausage frying in Miss Brooke's room."
 - (9:50 P.M.)—"Good night. Come to see me. Don't forget what I told you."
- "Did you get any express?"
- "I sure did get squelched to-day."
- "Did you flunk on Spherical?"
- "Hello, 'Beautiful!'"
- "Have you written up your Physics notebook? Let me see it."
- "Any dancing in Gym. to-night?"
- "Maggie, can us go to the dressmaker?"
- "You better not go up on Miss Kennedy's hall in that kimono!"

To Capsules

(With apologies to Robert Burns.)

O, were I in the Infirmary
I yonder see, I yonder see,
Upon the ground, you Capsules Dread,
I'd scatter thee, I'd scatter thee!
Or did Miss Mellown's white-capped form
Above me stand, above me stand,
I'd choose the wild of any storm,
Had she thee in hand, had she thee in hand.

When thy dread selves before me rise,
I pull my hair, I pull my hair.
This school would be a paradise
Without thee here, without thee here.
O, were I monarch of the globe,
With realms about, with realms about,
The day I donned my queenly robe
I'd blot thee out, I'd blot thee out!

M. M. AND N. A.

Measles

(With more apologies to Burns.)

O, my face's like a red, red rose That's newly sprung in June! O, my face is a perfect sight, And I feel like a perfect loon!

As fair as thy face, my measly friend, So deep in hue is mine; And I will look the same, my dear, So long as I here recline.

Until the weather gets dry, my dear, And the earth warms with the sun, I must stay in my room, my dear, Till the course o' measles is run.

My classes leave me far behind,
And bid me farewell for a while;
But I will catch up soon, my dear.
Though it were ten thousand mile.

SENIOR VICTIMS.

Miss K.: "Now, girls, be very sure that you can name all the female goddesses."

Instructor: "What important fact does Carlyle tell us about Webster?" Mattie C.: "That he had a tan complexion."

Elaine P.: "I wonder if the 'ark of the covenant' is the same as Noah's."

Hope L. (kneeling to say her prayers): "55 B.C., Roman invasion; second century, Christianity; 449, Saxons—O, pshaw!"

Girl (to Miss R.): "Please give me a plate; Miss Grote has a fish in class."

Miss R.: "Miss Grote has a fit! Where is she?"

Maude C.: "Inez, I know that Chaucer was born in 1340 and died in 1600."

Girl (with perplexed frown): "I don' see why they call Dr. Palmer doctor. I never hear of his practicing medicine."

Ethel: "Merle, what is circumstantial evidence?"

Merle: "For goodness sake! I'm studying Harmony; don't bother me with Psychology questions."

Girl: "Hawthorne was born in 1804; but feeling it would not be a success, he moved to Salem."

Mary A. (to Lucy Moore): "Look here, Lucy; this Literature lesson for to-morrow says Swift didn't like the curriculum at Dublin University. Who wrote that?"

Lucy: "Law, child, I don't know! I just can't remember all these books. 'Curriculum'—it sounds to me kinder like Bacon."
